P3C Technologies is a service started by Brad Otto in 1996 originally to aid home users with their technology needs. The "P3C" originally stood for Personal Computer Construction and Consultation back in the day when building custom computers for people was still profitable! The business has transitioned to technology consulting services for the home and business. The typical market we serve includes home users that need in-person and / or remote assistance as well as small to medium businesses that do not have the requirement to employ a full-time IT staff.

- "...able to handle any hardware or software questions, problems or needs"
- "...invaluable in not only solving our problems, but in helping us understand how to avoid and fix problems ourselves"
- "...ability to take something that sounds very foreign to us and make it easy to use and understand"
- "...service is not only excellent it has been extremely timely and really quite economical"

Our clients' testimonials say it quite well...

P3C Technologies serves home users and businesses alike by translating technical aspects into easily understood language, and providing quick, economical service.
